18 Having reviewed the Plaintiffs' Unopposed Motion for an Award of Attorneys' Fees and 19 Costs and the documents submitted in support thereof, the Court now FINDS, CONCLUDES,
20 and ORDERS as follows:

21 1. Plaintiffs filed this class action case on December 17, 2002, alleging violations
22 of Title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act ("ADA"), 42 U.S.C. § 12181 et seq., and the 23 Unruh Civil Rights Act. ("Unruh"), Cal. Civ. Code § 51 et seq. ECF 1. Plaintiffs amended
24 their complaint to assert violations of the California Disabled Persons Act ("CDPA"), Cal. Civ.
25 Code § 54 et seq., in August, 2003. ECF 36. Plaintiffs alleged that Taco Bell corporate 26 restaurants in California contained barriers to customers who use wheelchairs or scooters in 27 violation of those statutes.
28

1           2.       On February 23, 2004, the Court certified the following class.

2       All individuals with disabilities who use wheelchairs or electric scooters for mobility
3       who, at any time on or after December 17, 2001, were denied, or are currently being
4       denied, on the basis of disability, full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, or accommodations of California Taco Bell corporate restaurants.

5       Moeller v. Taco Bell Corp., 220 F.R.D. 604, 613-14 (N.D. Cal. 2004). On July 26, 2012, this
6       Court decertified the damages portion of the class originally certified in 2004, but maintained
7       certification of a Rule 23(b)(2) injunctive class. Moeller v. Taco Bell Corp., 2012 WL
8       3070863 (N.D. Cal. July 26, 2012).

9           3.       This case has been intensely litigated and has resulted in significant access
10       improvements at over 200 Taco Bell restaurants, a settlement putting in place a system to 11       ensure that those improvements are maintained, and a number of significant legal holdings that 12       strengthen the rights of people with disabilities to accessible places of public accommodation.

13          4.       The parties reached a settlement in the matter on April 25, 2014. The 14       Settlement Agreement, ECF 797-1, acknowledges the extensive steps Defendant Taco Bell
15       Corp. ("TBC") took to remedy barriers in its corporate restaurants in response to the litigation
16       and the important role the Class and Class Counsel have played in promoting and ensuring the 17       accessibility of Taco Bell restaurants, id. ¶ 1.5, and sets forth requirements designed to ensure 18       that such access is maintained, id. ¶ 4. In the Settlement Agreement, TBC agrees to pay
19       $5,375,000 in damages and attorneys' fees and costs, and agreed to support Class Counsel's
20       request for attorneys' fees and costs up to the amount of $5,175,000. Id. ¶ 6.

21          5.       On June 4, 2014, this Court granted preliminary approval to the parties'
22       settlement and ordered that Class Counsel file an application for attorneys' fees on or before
23       August 1, 2014. ECF 798 at 2.

24          6.       Plaintiffs have now filed their Unopposed Motion for An Award of Attorneys'
25       Fees and Costs, supported by the declarations of Class Counsel Amy Robertson, Mari Mayeda,
26       Antonio Lawson, and Jocelyn Larkin and expert Linda Dardarian. Ms. Robertson's declaration
27       attached summary spreadsheets setting forth the number of hours billed, the rates of attorneys
28

1 who billed more than two percent of the time on the case, and the issues to which the time was
2 devoted.

3 7. These declarations establish the experience, credentials, and rates of Class
4 Counsel, which this Court approves. Indeed, Class Counsel are using rates approved by 5 another Court in this district two years ago. Vallabhapurapu v. Burger King Corp.,
6 3:11-cv-00667-WHA (N.D. Cal.), approved by Judge Alsup in 2012. Id., ECF 238. These 7 rates are thus slightly below market, as they have not increased in two years.

8 8. Ms. Robertson's declaration and exhibits establish that Class Counsel deducted
9 from their fee calculations time devoted to absent class member damages and the 2012
10 interlocutory appeal. With those deductions, Class Counsel's fees total $13,742,971.25. To 11 arrive at their lodestar, Class Counsel applied an across-the-board 20% reduction, to arrive at a
12 lodestar of $10,994,377.00. The amount Class Counsel requests in fees -- $5,175,000 -- is less 13 than half of that lodestar, or an overall 60% reduction from their full fees.

14 9. Ms. Robertson's declaration also attached a summary of Class Counsel's out-of-
15 pocket costs, showing the types of expenses incurred, and demonstrating that the total was 16 $1,017,408.04.

17 10. In the Settlement Agreement, TBC agreed to pay $5,375,000 in damages and 18 attorneys' fees and costs, and agreed to support Class Counsel's request for attorneys' fees and 19 costs up to the amount of $5,175,000. Even where a settlement agreement provides for fees
20 and a defendant commits to support them, in the class action context, a court must still ensure 21 that the attorney's fees and costs awarded are "fundamentally fair, adequate, and reasonable."
22 See Staton v. Boeing, Co., 327 F. 3d 938, 963-64 (9th Cir. 2003). In this case, the amount that 23 Class Counsel agreed to accept is far less than their lodestar, making it eminently fair,
24 reasonable, and adequate for the class.

25 11. Title III of the ADA provides for an award of reasonable attorneys' fees and 26 costs to prevailing parties, 42 U.S.C. § 12205, as do Unruh and the CDPA, Cal. Civ. Code §§
27 52(b)(3); 54.3(a). "[A] 'reasonable' fee is a fee that is sufficient to induce a capable attorney
28 to undertake the representation of a meritorious civil rights case. . . . [T]he lodestar method

1 yields a fee that is presumptively sufficient to achieve this objective.” Perdue v. Kenny A., 559
 2 U.S. 542, 552 (2010) (citations omitted). “[U]nder federal fee-shifting statutes ‘the lodestar
 3 approach’ is the guiding light’ in determining a ‘reasonable’ fee. Under that method, the court
 4 first determines the appropriate hourly rate for the work performed, and then multiplies that
 5 amount by the number of hours properly expended in doing the work.” Antoninetti v. Chipotle
 6 Mexican Grill, Inc., 643 F.3d 1165, 1176 (9th Cir. 2010) (citing Perdue.)

7 12. Although this Court must “‘provide a concise but clear explanation of its 8 reasons for the fee award,’ [this] merely obliges the court ‘to give at least some indication of 9 how it arrived at the amount of compensable hours for which fees were awarded to allow for 10 meaningful appellate review.’ The court is not ‘required to set forth an hour-by-hour analysis
 11 of the fee request[,] ... [and] when faced with a massive fee application the district court has 12 the authority to make across-the-board percentage cuts either in the number of hours claimed
 13 or in the final lodestar figure as a practical means of trimming the fat from a fee application.’”
 14 Schwarz v. Sec’y of Health & Human Servs., 73 F.3d 895, 906 (9th Cir. 1995) (citations 15 omitted).

16 13. Here, Class Counsel have voluntarily eliminated all time devoted towards the 17 unsuccessful interlocutory appeal, as well as the class member damages claims, and have 18 further cut their lodestar by a 20% across-the-board reduction as part of their billing judgment.
 19 The resulting lodestar of $10,994,377.00 is well supported by applicable precedent. See, e.g., 20 Walker v. U.S. Dep’t of Hous. & Urban Dev., 99 F.3d 761, 770 (5th Cir. 1996) (finding that
 21 15% across-the-board reduction was appropriate where there was no exercise of billing
 22 judgment); Fortson v. Marriott Int’l, Inc., 2013 WL 1832411, at *8 (N.D. Cal. May 1, 2013)
 23 (Where “there is no evidence that . . . counsel made any reduction in the hours that it billed,”
 24 the “approach that the courts in this district have taken . . . is a ten-percent across-the-board
 25 reduction in fees to reflect the ordinary exercise of billing judgment.”). The twenty percent
 26 reduction applied by Class Counsel more than accounts for any billing judgment.

27 14. In any event, the actual amount sought by Class Counsel -- $5,175,000 -- is 28 significantly less even than this amount, and is approved as reasonable.

1           15.     Although the calculations above do not take costs into account, the Court has 2 reviewed Exhibit 3 to Ms. Robertson's declaration and holds that the costs incurred were 3 reasonable as well.

4           16.     It is therefore ORDERED that Class Counsel be awarded $5,175,000 in 5 reasonable attorneys' fees and costs in accordance with the Settlement Agreement.

7 IT IS SO ORDERED.
